What not to forget before the celebration

A checklist for a wedding, a bar or bat mitzvah, a birthday. The timings are a guide: move them to suit you.

4-6 months before

- [ ] The guest list: name, phone, whose side, which language they read
- [ ] Decide early about children and plus-ones
- [ ] Venue, photographer, host: contracts signed
- [ ] The budget: who pays for what

In InviteBerry guests load from an Excel or CSV file, or you simply forward their contacts from WhatsApp to the InviteBerry chat, and every guest has their own language.

6-8 weeks before

- [ ] The invitation in three languages, with the Hebrew date
- [ ] How guests will reply: coming or not, how many, children, food
- [ ] Send the invitations

An invitation site in three languages with the RSVP inside: no app, no account.

3-4 weeks before

- [ ] Remind those who haven't replied
- [ ] Special meals: vegetarian, gluten-free, kosher
- [ ] Transport and parking

On Premium and Grand, the invitation can go out again only to those who haven't replied yet.

2 weeks before

- [ ] Seating: who shouldn't sit together, older guests away from the speakers, a children's table
- [ ] Give the venue the final head count and the special meals

Seating by drag and drop, straight from the guests' replies.

1-2 days before

- [ ] The day-before message: address, time, parking, directions
- [ ] A list of guests and tables for the entrance

On the day

- [ ] Who greets the guests and answers the phone
- [ ] How guests will share their photos

On paid plans, guests upload photos to the event gallery from their phone, with no app.

Afterwards

- [ ] A thank-you to the guests within a week
- [ ] Share the photos with the guests
- [ ] Settle the expenses and the gifts

On paid plans, the guests' photo gallery and the budget sit in one panel.
